Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 16 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Often windy with rain or showers, but drier spells too.

Today:
A band of rain will clear eastwards, although slow to clear parts of south-east England, and particularly north-west Scotland where it will remain very windy. Mild with some sunshine to follow, but also heavy showers this afternoon.

Tonight:
Showers dying out, leaving clear spells behind, but further rain moving east through the night and becoming windy once again.

Wednesday:
Rain clearing during the morning, but returning to many southern and central areas during the afternoon and evening. Some sunshine for a time, heavy showers in the northwest where windy.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Rain clears eastwards on Thursday, with showers following. Further rain, locally heavy, then affecting many western areas Friday and Saturday. Remaining generally mild, perhaps exceptionally so by Saturday.
